MODERN DENTISTRY

DR. H. B. FOUTZ
In Charge.
Sanitation is the demand of the day.

The mouth is the most important entry for infection and therefore needs the most skillful hygienic supervision.

One or more decayed teeth with constant infection can so impair the vitality of the child that physical and intellectual development is impossible. Relieved of this impairment the child will grow into a self-supporting, self-respecting individual, endowed with intelligence and capable of contributing to the welfare of society. It seems a miracle to convert the stupid dunces incapable of the simplest forms of mental activity into the wideawake energetic youth. Yet this is what modern dentistry does.

Lost or impaired teeth can be restored to their anatomical contour and masticating efficiency, painlessly and scientifically by the New Method Dentistry.

TEETH EXTRACTED POSITIVELY WITHOUT PAIN
No long waits. Four courteous licensed operators. All work guaranteed ten years.

ALHAMBRA TOMORROW CHAS RAY, THE STAR

CHARLES RAY IN "THE SHERIFF'S SON"

To be a Thomas H. Ince star is an honor which many motion picture players covet but few enjoy, but to be recognized as one of the cleverest of the great galaxy of stars marshalled beneath the Ince-Paramount banner, is one of the rarest distinctions the screen world is in a position to bestow. Charles Ray, young, able and virile, has by the exercise of his native talents, become one of the most conspicuous screen stars in the country. In the portrayal of rugged characters, especially those illustrative of quaint types of young American manhood, he stands in a class by himself. Among his more recent photoplays are "His Home Town," "A Nine O'Clock Town," "The Law of the North" and "String Beans." In all of these Mr. Ray displayed his versatility with excellent effect. In his latest starring vehicle, produced under the supervision of Mr. Ince, the young star has a role of unusual power and attractiveness to a man of his temperament—that of a young man born with the taint of fear in his blood, who ultimately redeems himself and rises superior to the supposedly inexorable law of pre-natal influence. The locale of the story is the great west and if advanced production reports may be relied upon, Mr. Ray's new picture is likely to cause a sensation.

William McLeod Raine, author of "The Sheriff's Son," is a well-known novelist and magazine writer, whose stories have won him considerable renown. Mr. Raine knows his West and his knowledge has been employed to excellent advantage in his latest story.

One of the best known scenarists in the country is J. G. Hawks, who adapted "The Sheriff's Son" for the screen. He has recently written pictures in which William S. Hart, Dorothy Dalton and other Ince stars have appeared, and all have earned much critical praise for their author. That Mr. Hawks' talents show no evidences of deterioration by contrast with his previous achievements, is amply proved in his latest photoplay.

Royal Beaudry, whose father, a brave sheriff, is killed by the Ruthless band of cattle rustlers soon after Royal's birth, is born with the taint of fear in his blood. He is sent to a school in the east to be educated and twenty years later he is practicing law. One day he receives word that the rustlers who killed his father have abducted or slain David Dingwell, the man who cared for Royal during his boyhood days, and he is requested to go to New Mexico and assist in their dispersion. Fear tugs at his soul and he seeks to escape the ordeal, but the cowboy messenger appeals to his manhood and finally wins him over. In New Mexico he one day meets Beulah Rutherford who has been caught in a wolf trap, and he is disconcerted when he learns that she is the daughter of the man who was responsible for his father's death. His identity is discovered and Jesse Tighe, in whose cellar Dingwell is a prisoner, resolves to kill Royal. Beulah hears of this plan and tries to warn Royal who, meanwhile, has been shot in the shoulder from ambush. By a ruse Beulah frees Dingwell and with Royal he rejoins the law-and-order element. Beulah is lost and falls in a prospect hole where Royal later finds and rescues her. The lawless element is driven out of the country, Royal being one of the leaders in the movement. Royal tells Beulah of his pre-natal fear, but she disproves his argument and when it later develops that Beulah is not the daughter of Rutherford but his niece, Royal and Beulah plight their troth.

Victor L. Scherzinger, one of the ablest directors in the country, directed Mr. Ray in "The Sheriff's Son." Mr. Scherzinger directed many of Mr. Ray's recent picture successes and he is recognized as one of the best men in his line identified with the screen industry. A two-reel Paramount comedy added.

Valves for Safety of Water Supply of Ogden City

As a measure of greater safety to the water system of the city and for the purpose of making it easier to gauge the amount of water used by the city, two large valves and regulators will be installed on the Twenty-fifth street main and a large gate and regulator near the mouth of the main pipe line leading from the source through Ogden canyon.

In order to place these improvements it will be necessary to construct concrete compartments below the street level. The compartments will have ample room for the gates and regulators and will be electrically lighted.

Theatres

ALHAMBRA TODAY
How an out of date department store may be transformed by the common sense and intelligence of a girl into a prosperous enterprise, is told in "Maggie Pepper" the new Paramount picture which will be seen at the Alhambra theater today. Furthermore, the picture depicts the struggles of the clever Maggie against heavy odds, enemies and adverse circumstances. The big, human note is uppermost in this play which was written by Charles Klein, Gardner Hunting did the scenario and Chester Withey directed the production.

Ethel Clayton in the title role is said to be superb. She has the peculiar quality of alertness and activity, as well as the charm and culture to make the role one that will not soon be forgotten. The production is far above the average, which is easily believable when it is remembered that this is a Paramount picture.

There has been a most remarkable response and the city now puts on an appearance of cleanliness which is commendable. Inspector Burt stated this morning that rubbish which had accumulated for the past fifteen years had been dug up and carted to the streets.
